

iPhone Reachability

One of the problems with the iPhone X series is that the apps go all the way to the top edge making it difficult sometimes to reach the app's on the top row.

But Apple has that solved, by turning on Reachability. In Settings>General>Accessibility and find Reachability and turn the switch on.

Now you can make the top row accessible by swiping down on the lower area of the screen. This brings the top row into reach.

This can also be done on the newer large iPhones by highly touching the Home Button, the result is the same.
